QUARTERLY REVIEW

DGHM UltraValue returned -1.4% during the quarter, which was below the Russell 3000 Value return of 3.3% and the S&P 500 return of 4.5%. Because it is a ten-stock portfolio, volatility in both directions is unavoidable. We actively review the portfolio and compare it against all available stocks to ensure that the stocks we believe have the best risk-reward trade-offs are in the portfolio; this discipline, we believe, gives us the best potential for superior long-term performance.

The biggest detractors during the quarter were Brookdale Senior Living (BKD), Interpublic Group (IPG), and Twenty-First Century Fox (FOX). BKD was affected by the impact of new supply on the industry, leading to a decline in occupancy. Company is still exploring strategic options, such as an asset sale, and we believe it is trading substantially below net asset value. IPG underperformed due to a deteriorating advertising market driven by lower spending by consumer packaged goods customers. FOX underperformed due to weaknesses in advertising spending, lower ratings in its broadcast network, and a weak film slate.

The strongest performers during the quarter were American Eagle Outfitters (AEO), Eastman Chemical Company (EMN), and Cisco Systems (CSCO). AEO has continued to differentiate itself from many troubled apparel retailers. Their strong product offering is resonating with their customer base, and the recognition of this, combined with a very depressed valuation, benefitted the stock in the third quarter. EMN shares were up during what proved to be a solid quarter for the Basic Materials sector. The company reported sales and earnings that beat expectations and also raised its full year outlook. CSCO benefited from strength in technology stocks during the quarter versus the market as a whole, and solid fundamentals in its core businesses.

During the quarter we did not buy any new names, but we received Brighthouse Financial (BHF) in a spin-off from MetLife (MET). BHF was formerly MET's U.S. retail life and annuity business. Following the spin-off, the price fell due to selling pressure from the recipients unloading the stock. We believe there is strong near term appreciation potential as the valuation recovers to normalized levels. Valuation is cheap at 0.5x book and 6x earnings. We sold Interpublic Group of Companies as fundamentals began to deteriorate as evidenced by slowing organic growth, affecting mostly consumer packaged food companies.
